Petit Larceny Is a Misdemeanor Only, and hence it is immaterial whether an article stolen was worth seven dollars or fifteen dollars. Bernal v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1906) 95 S. W. 118.

10. Moss v. State, 146 Ala. 686, 40 So. 340; Vandergrift v. State, (Ala. 1907) 43 So. 852; Ayers v. State, 3 Ga. App. 305, 59 S. E. 924; Portwood v. State, 124 Ga. 783, 53 S. E. 99; In re Spaulding, 75 Kan. 163, 88 Pac. 547.

Proof of Value. — Under the Texas statute making domestic animals or birds, of any specific value, the subject of theft, failure to prove value is fatal to a conviction for larceny. Hasley v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1906) 94 S. W. 899.

Banknotes are considered as money, and a national bank bill is itself sufficient evidence that it is worth its face value. Jainer v. State, 124 Ga. 102, 52 S. E. 151; Sowles v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1907) 105 S. W. 178.

Silver and Currency.— On a trial for larceny of seventy-two dollars in silver and currency evidence by the prosecutor that the amount of money stolen was seventy-two dollars is synonymous with the value. Gibson v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1907) 100 S. W. 776.

467. 1. Francis v. State, 87 Miss. 493, 39 So. 897.

2. Moss v. State, 146 Ala. 686, 40 So. 340.

3. Proof of Market Value is not the sole criterion of value sufficient to sustain grand larceny, and opinions of nonexperts as to the value of a stolen article are admissible. Vandergrift v. State, (Ala. 1907) 43 So. 852.

Proof of market value at the time of trial is sufficient where testimony is produced showing no change in value from the time of the theft up to the time of the trial. Cummings v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1907) 106 S. W. 363.

The market value is shown by testimony as to the value of the article stolen at the time and place it was taken and its condition. Keipp v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1907) 103 S. W. 392.

In Colorado, it is provided by statute (2 Mills' Anno. Stat., §§ 3139, 3159, and 3620) that the surface owner may require the mining owner to give a bond to secure the payment of damages resulting from the removal of minerals. It is held under this statute, that the failure of the surface owner to exact such security as a condition precedent, did not release the mining owner removing such minerals from the payment of damages caused by his negligence. Measure of Damages.—The rule is settled that the measure of damages for permanent and irremediable injury to land caused by failure to give surface support is the actual loss in the depreciation of the value thereof. The permanence of the injury is the test of the application of the rule. If the injury is reparable the cost of repairing may be recovered, and if the cost of repairing is greater than the diminution in the market, the latter is the true measure of damages. Injury to a Spring can be considered only as incidental to and affecting the value of the land. Rabe v. Schoenberger Coal Co., 213 Pa. St. 252, 62 Atl. 854; Weaver v. Berwind-White Coal Co., 216 Pa. St. 195, 65 Atl. 545.

Evidence showing the value of springs in themselves, as a separate, independent item, not connected with the general value of the land is inadmissible. Rabe v. Schoenberger Coal Co., 213 Pa. St. 252, 62 Atl. 854.

The value of springs as an element in estimating the value of the land, or the destruction of them, in determining the depreciation in the value of the land after the injury is a proper matter for the consideration of the jury. Definitions of Criminal Libel. — [illegible] Duncan, (Ky. 1907) 104 S. W. 997.

Foundation of Criminal Libel. The foundation of the theory on which libel is made a crime is that by provoking passions of persons libeled it excites them to violence and a breach of the peace. Therefore, a criminal prosecution can be sustained where no civil action would lie. People v. Eastman, 188 N. Y. 478, 81 N. E. 459.

"The Thief Who Puts His Hand in Your Pocket and Steals Your Money Is a Gentleman," when used in connection with statements that plaintiff borrowed money, etc., and got himself into a position where the law could not reach him and then took advantage of the Bankruptcy Law, was held susceptible of the meaning that plaintiff was dishonest and acted fraudulently in his business, and therefore actionable per se. In Minnesota, under Rev. Laws 1905, § 4918, the writing and mailing of a libelous article to a person defamed is a sufficient publication, but the court in the case of Kramer v. Perkins, 102 Minn. 455, 113 N. W. 1062, doubts its application to civil actions, and says the rule is applicable more particularly to criminal prosecutions.

Proximate Cause Held Question for Jury. — Butler v. New England Structural Co., 191 Mass. 397, 77 N. E. 764.

Where the evidence, though circumstantial, is such that it would appear possible that the injury resulted from any one of several causes, and yet points to the greater probability that it resulted from the specific cause charged by the plaintiff, a nonsuit should not be granted. In the latter case the jury would be justified in returning a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, although it be possible that the injury may have resulted from some other cause. The law does not anticipate or attempt to exclude mere possibilities. Adams v. Bunker Hill Min. Co., 12 Idaho 637, 89 Pac. 624.

That the servant was a foreman with much power over other employees, does not place him outside of the class of persons to whom the master owes the duty of exercising reasonable care in furnishing a safe place and instrumentalities for work. Viou v. Brooks-Scanlon Lumber Co., 99 Minn. 97, 108 N. W. 891.

The doctrine of a safe place has no application where the place was safe, and was only made unsafe by the negligent act of a third party, for which the defendant was not responsible. Penner v. Vinton Co., 141 Mich. 77, 104 N. W. 385.

The place furnished to work must not alone be safe from such dangers as are patent, but also from such as are latent; not alone from those in the place, but also from such extraneous matters as menace its safety, and which could be ascertained upon reasonable inquiry. Williams v. Sleepy Hollow Min. Co., 37 Colo. 62, 86 Pac. 337.

A platform built on piling at the edge of a lake, upon which workmen are directed to carry on the operations of unloading logging cars, is an appliance or place, within the rule requiring the master to furnish a reasonably safe place for his employees to carry on their work. Bailey v. Swallow, 98 Minn. 104, 107 N. W. 747.

A master cannot relieve himself from the duty of maintaining a safe place for work by a contract with a third person requiring such third person to keep the place in a safe condition. Pacific Express Co. v. Shivers, (Tex. Civ. App. 1906) 92 S. W. 46.

The duty does not obtain except in the case of premises and the parts thereof where servants in reason may be expected to be. Leffler v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Assoc., 127 Mo. App. 488, 106 S. W. 105.

Want of Control of Place by Master. — Where a master is a mere lessee of space for his servants to work in, he is not required to inspect or liable for injuries due to a pail's falling from steam pipes over which he had no control. The rule which requires the master to use reasonable diligence to furnish a reasonably safe place for his employees to work has no application to those whose duty it is to make dangerous places safe. Kellyville Coal Co. v. Bruzas, 223 Ill. 595, 79 N. E. 309.

In Montgomery v. Robertson, 229 Ill. 466, 82 N. E. 396, the court said: "There is a general rule that a master must exercise reasonable care to furnish a reasonably safe place for his servant to work, but that rule is subject to limitations and exceptions. One exception universally recognized is that the general rule does not apply where the conditions are changing from time to time in the prosecution of the work. If the nature of the work is such as to produce changes and temporary conditions in the place where the work is performed, the rule does not require the master to keep the place reasonably safe under such changed conditions which the work renders necessary."

It is absurd to suppose that the master's duty to provide a reasonably safe place in which his servant shall work, extends to safeguarding the route of every journey he may be required to make in fetching and carrying, whether messages or portable articles. American Bridge Co. v. Bainum, (C. C. A.) 146 Fed. 367.

Where a master directs without further instructions his servant to deliver goods on the premises of another, he is not responsible for the safety of the premises or appliances of his customer. De Maries v. Jameson, 98 Minn. 453, 108 N. W. 830.

An employer is not responsible for an injury sustained by his employee, caused solely by unsafe premises which are owned and controlled by a third person, and where the employee's services are performed. The reason of the rule is that the employer does not own, use, or control the premises, and hence is without power to make any change in their condition. Long v. John Stephenson Co., 73 N. J. L. 186, 63 Atl. 910.

If the appliances in general use are obviously dangerous, the master does not perform his duty by furnishing such appliances. Yazdzewski v. Barker, 131 Wis. 494, 111 N. W. 689.

The fact that the brand of fuse supplied by a mining company for the use of its miners is in general use and favorably known is not conclusive evidence that the company is not guilty of negligence in furnishing that particular kind of fuse for use in its mines. Nor is the fact that a better and safer kind of fuse has been introduced within recent years and come into common use conclusive evidence that the company is negligent in using the older kind. Both facts are but evidence for the consideration of the jury in determining whether the employer failed to exercise the degree of care required by the circumstances, the nature of the instrumentalities, and the danger to be anticipated from defective appliances. If the master is not in a position to safeguard his servants by inspection of appliances, he must refrain from giving his servants orders to use them whereby their safety will be imperilled. De Maries v. Jameson, 98 Minn. 453, 108 N. W. 830.

An employee who, without his master's authority, creates a dangerous condition in the place in which he is working, assumes the risk which such dangerous condition produces. He has no claim on his master for protection against it, and no right to compensation from the latter for injuries resulting from it though the master is aware of it. Sharp v. Durand, 71 N. J. L. 354, 59 Atl. 7.

4. At Common Law the servant has no lien for wages upon property produced by his labor. Michaelson v. Fish, 1 Cal. App. 116, 81 Pac. 661.

A receiver appointed in a foreclosure suit upon the allegation of the complainant that the property was insufficient in value to satisfy the mortgage indebtedness is not a "receiver" within the contemplation of Burns's Ann. Stat. 1901, § 1236, subd. 4, giving preference to wages of laborers when a receiver is appointed. McDaniel v. Osborn, (Ind. App. 1904) 72 N. E. 601.

Under the Indiana statute providing that "when the property of any company * * * shall be seized by any process," etc., its employees shall have a preferential lien for labor performed, to entitle employees to a lien it is not necessary that all of the property of the company shall have been taken under process if the company has afterwards disposed of all of its property not taken. Anundsen v. Standard Printing Co., 129 Iowa 200, 105 N. W. 424.

5. Change of Venue. — Walker v. Maronda, 15 N. Dak. 63, 106 N. W. 296.

244. 1. "May Be Paid." — The by-laws of an accident insurance society provided, among other things, that a deficiency "may be paid from the emergency fund." It was held that the words "may be paid" left it optional with the board of directors to make such payment, and was not mandatory. Crawford v. Northwestern Traveling Men's Assoc., 226 Ill. 57, 80 N. E. 736.

"May Cause." — In an instruction to a jury that plaintiff was entitled to recover for "such bodily pain and mental suffering as you may believe such injuries may hereafter cause her," the use of the word may was held not erroneous as allowing a recovery for speculative or contingent results. Halley v. St. Joseph R. Light, etc., Co., 115 Mo. App. 652, 91 S. W. 163.

"May Have Received." — Use of the word may in an instruction to the jury that the plaintiff should recover such damages as she "may have received" is not erroneous, the word may being used to express the possibility of the existence of such damages, no element of probability being included. Henry v. Omaha Packing Co., (Neb. 1908) 115 N. W. 777.

MECHANIC — MECHANICAL.

251. 2. Mechanical Equivalent — Patent Law. — The term mechanical equivalent has a broad and generous signification in the interpretation of a pioneer patent, a very narrow and restricted meaning in the construction of a patent for a slight improvement, and, in the interpretation of patents for the great mass of inventions which fall between these extremes, its meaning is proportioned to the advance which the invention under consideration evidences. See Mallon v. Gregg, 137 Fed. 68, 69 C. C. A. 48.

MISSIONARY.

804. 7. "The Terms 'Missionary' and 'Missionary Society' are of common use, and have a well accepted meaning. This meaning is the same whether the use is intended to be precise and technical or merely that of everyday speech. By universal acceptance the word missionary, whether as a noun or adjective, embraces, not only the conception of a religious, charitable, or educational work or worker, but also of such a work done through philanthropic motives, for the welfare of others too poor, too unappreciative, or too indifferent to do it themselves, and by persons supported or means furnished in part at least by some agency of which those for whom the work is done do not form a sustaining part. The derivative of the word implies a sending, and so it is that in both technical and common speech, the idea of a sending forth, a sending forth to the service of others, the doing of a work for others, is associated with its meaning. Sometimes it is used to characterize the agency sent; sometimes of the agency sending; but always there is associated with the notion of a benevolent service for others that of such service sent whether far or near by those who maintain it to those who need it."
